Q-V Read the passage carefully and answer the questions given at the end.

The honey bee is a very interesting and useful insect. It flies from flower to flower collecting nectar and changes it into honey, which we all like to eat. The bee hive is almost a perfect example of a community home. Its strength and size are remarkable. If you compare the size of the bee with the size of its home you will realize that man had never built anything comparable to the bee hive until the modern sky- scrapers were built. The honey bees' skill in architecture is unsurpassed among insects and birds.

Question

i. Why honey bee is a useful insect?

ii. How honey is made by the bee?

iii. What is remarkable about a honey bee?

iv. Suggest a suitable title of the passage.
